Areas of research activity:

The candidate will carry out research related to typical SSD issues, in particular the candidate will have to work in the University of Pisa unit of the project UNDERLANDSCAPE (PI Vincenzo Palleschi CNT, PI UNIPi Enrica Salvatori)

The UNDERLANDSCAPE project aims at the definition of a methodology for the multi-cultural, interdisciplinary study of rock structures. The methodology, which is organically integrated between the scientific/technical and the historic/archaeological approaches, will be specifically finalized to the acquisition of a deeper knowledge of these structures and of their environment diachronically (from the antiquity to middle ages and post middle ages until recent times) and in their various manifestations, through the coordination and the application of up to date archaeometric, non destructive diagnostic methods, and digital and multimedia technologies for archaeological, geo-historical and paleobotanical research, virtual modelling and communication. The project will be developed in Lunigiana and Garfagnana, and will define a protocol of study and analysis devoted to the understanding, conservation and valorization of the rock and/or underground structures. The researcher must personally conduct research and coordinate any research by fellows or graduating students of documental, cartographic and toponymy sources and produce a systematic collection of the relevant data documenting the material evidence in the region. He/she will also organize and manage in the two areas (Lunigiana and Garfagnana) archaeological surveys, preceded by the analysis of the written documentation, previous knowledge about the settlements and the historical cartography, and of the paleovegetation data

Aims and Objectives and envisaged research output:

Participation in national and international scientific conferences

- Development of innovative research protocols and investigation models in mountain areas, in particular in hypogeal environments, also with a view to their valorization

- Production of scientific articles for national and international journals

- Organisation of a workshop on the research topics
