Title of the activities covered by the appointment:

Modelling the synthesis process of advanced biomaterials and scaffolds and their integration with biological tissues through artificial intelligence tools and finite element analysis in the framework.

Activities to be carried out (covered by the appointment):

In silico modeling for the rational optimization of advanced 4D biomaterials compatible with minimally invasive deposition. The modeling will integrate scaffold fabrication processes and their interface with biological tissue, taking into account mechanical properties, degradation, nutrient transport, and the dynamic 4D responses of the materials. The models will be based on advanced bioengineering approaches combining artificial intelligence and finite element simulations for predictive, multiscale design.

Specific responsibility relating to the activities of the appointment and functions to be performed:

Implementation of in silico models to optimise the formulation of advanced biomaterials with 4D functionalities, compatible with minimally invasive deposition. Modelling will include analysis of the manufacturing process of scaffolds for tissue regeneration and their integration with biological tissue in terms of mechanical properties, degradation, nutrient diffusion and 4D behaviour.
